

Peter Schoettle

Peter Schoettle is the director of policy programs at the Brookings Institution's Center for Executive Education. He directs seminars for government and private enterprise executives and foreign embassies on a range of topics, including the policy process in Washington, dealing with Congress, business strategies for government agencies, and foreign policy issues.

Dr. Schoettle is a retired U.S. foreign service officer, with more than 22 years of experience at the U.S. Department of State. He served overseas in the American embassies in Greece, Poland, and Japan. He participated in a number of major international negotiations, including START, the Conference on Disarmament in Europe (CDE), the G-7 Summit in Tokyo, and others.

At the State Department in Washington, DC, Dr. Schoettle served as German and Russian Desk Officer, a member of the Secretary's policy planning staff, and director of political training at the Foreign Service Institute. He participated in the committee guiding the Department's reform and reinvention efforts. He was an assistant professor of political science at Rutgers University. He has two years active duty military service with the U.S. Army, as the liaison officer to the German Army.

Dr. Schoettle received an M.A. and a Ph.D. in political science from Columbia University.