

Fiona Hill

Dr. Fiona Hill is director of the Center on the United States and Europe, and a senior fellow in the Foreign Policy Studies Program at The Brookings Institution. She is a frequent commentator on Russian and Eurasian affairs, and has researched and published extensively on issues related to Russia, relations among the states of the former Soviet Union, the Caucasus region, Central Asia, ethno-political conflicts in Eurasia, and energy and strategic issues.

Her book with Brookings Senior Fellow Clifford Gaddy, The Siberian Curse: How Communist Planners Left Russia Out in the Cold, was published by Brookings Press in December 2003; and her monograph Energy Empire: Oil, Gas and Russia's Revival was published in London by the Foreign Policy Centre in 2004.

Other select publications include: "Fear of Democracy or Revolution: The Reaction to Andijan?" (with Kevin Jones) in The Washington Quarterly, Summer 2006; "Turkey and Russia: Axis of the Excluded?" (with Omer Taspinar) in Survival, Spring 2006; "Whither Kazakhstan?" In the National Interest, October 2005; "Beyond Codependency: European Reliance on Russian Energy," U.S.-Europe Analysis Series, July 2005; "A Spreading Danger: Time for a New Policy Toward Chechnya," (with Anatol Lieven and Thomas de Waal) Carnegie Endowment Policy Brief, March 2005; and "Governing Russia: Putin's Federal Dilemmas," New Europe Review, January 2005.

From 2006-2009, Hill was on leave from Brookings as the national intelligence officer for Russia and Eurasia at The National Intelligence Council. Prior to joining Brookings, Hill was director of strategic planning at the Eurasia Foundation in Washington, DC. From 1991-1999, she held a number of positions directing technical assistance and research projects at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, including associate director of the Strengthening Democratic Institutions Project (SDI), director of the Project on Ethnic Conflict in the Former Soviet Union, and coordinator of the Trilateral Study on Japanese-Russian-U.S. Relations.

Hill holds an M.A. degree in Russian and Modern History from St. Andrews University in Scotland; and an A.M. in Soviet Studies and Ph.D. in History from Harvard University, where she was a Frank Knox fellow. She has also pursued studies at the Maurice Thorez Institute of Foreign Languages in Moscow. Hill is president of the St. Andrews University American Foundation, and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.
