

Anthony Corrado

Anthony Corrado is a nonresident senior fellow in Governance Studies at the Brookings Institution and professor of government at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, where he teaches courses on American politics and political theory. Widely regarded as one of the nation's leading experts on political finance, Dr. Corrado serves as Chair of the Board of Trustees of the Campaign Finance Institute. He has served as a special advisor to the American Bar Association Committee on Election Law and as a member of the American Bar Association Advisory Commission on Election Law. He has also been appointed to a number of advisory boards.

Dr. Corrado is the author or coauthor of a number of books on campaign finance and elections, including Financing the 2008 Election, Financing the 2004 Election, Paying for Presidents, The New Campaign Finance Sourcebook, and Campaign Finance Reform: Beyond the Basics. He has published dozens of book chapters and articles on the financing of national elections, political party behavior, and campaign and election law. His previous professional activities include serving as project director of the Committee for Economic Development's Money in Politics and Improving Judicial Selection programs; principal investigator for the Coalition to Promote Civic Dialogue on Campaign Finance Reform, a nonpartisan civic education project sponsored by The Pew Charitable Trusts; and executive director of the Twentieth Century Fund Task Force on Presidential Debates. He also served on the national staff or as a consultant in four presidential campaigns.
