EVENT AGENDA

The Strategic Forum for U.S.-China Clean Energy Cooperation

Wednesday, October 21, 2009 to Friday, October 23, 2009

Diaoyutai State Guesthouse, Beijing, China

On October 21-October 23, 2009, The Brookings Institution and the China Institute of Strategy and Management hosted a major Strategic Forum for U.S.-China Clean Energy Cooperation, bringing together leaders in government, business, NGO, and the academic world.

Held in the Diaoyutai State Guesthouse in Beijing, the three-day conference featured keynote addresses by former U.S. Vice President Al Gore and Chinese Vice Premier Li Keqiang. Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao and Vice Premier Li Keqiang also addressed members of the conference in a closed, smaller group session. U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, U.S. Secretary of Energy Steven Chu, and John Holdren, President Barack Obama's Science and Technology Adviser, addressed the gathering via video.

Among the other officials delivering remarks during the conference were Assistant Secretary of Energy David Sandalow; Chairman of China's National Energy Administration Zhang Guobao; U.S. Ambassador to China Jon Huntsman; China Institute for Strategy and Management Chairman Zheng Bijian, and Brookings Chairman John L. Thornton. Conference participants included top U.S. and Chinese officials, business leaders, academics, scientists and representatives of environmental NGOs.

The conference addressed a wide range of issues, including Sino-U.S. cooperation on clean coal, renewable energy and electric vehicles.
