EXPERIENCE

The Prevention Project: Organizing Against Violent Extremism

March 2016-Present

Founder and Director

- Conducts research and convenes and otherwise consults with government, civil society, and private sector stakeholders in the United States and abroad to develop practical recommendations for operationalizing and sustaining a “whole of society” approach to preventing the spread of violent extremism both in the United States and internationally.
- Promotes the role of communities and civil society in preventing and countering violent extremism.
- Co-chairs, with the Women’s Alliance for Security Leadership, Global Solutions Exchange steering group – a global civil society advocacy, collaboration, and cooperation platform dedicated to preventing violent extremism.

Office of the Under Secretary Civilian Security, Democracy and Human Rights Dec. 2014-Mar 2016 US Department of State (Political Appointee)

Counselor on Counterterrorism and Countering Violent Extremism

Director CVE Summit Coordination Cell

- Principal adviser to the Under Secretary on a wide range of CT and CVE issues, with a primary focus on expanding the Department’s and international efforts to counter violent extremism.
- Policy coordinator for the February 2015 White House CVE Summit and follow-on process: responsible for developing the content for the event and the CVE Summit Action Agenda that shaped the six-month follow-on process that culminated in the September 2015 Leaders’ Summit on Countering ISIL and Violent Extremism. Presented to the UN in September, the agenda includes a focus on expanding research; empowering civil society; strengthening security force/community relations; counter-messaging; promoting the role of education in CVE; enhancing access to mainstream religious knowledge; addressing marginalization in communities vulnerable to violent extremist recruitment; and increasing development assistance to address violent extremism.
- Directed the eight-person CVE Summit Coordination Cell that 1) coordinated Department of State and wider US Government engagement with international partners on and drove implementation of the CVE Summit’s Action Agenda; and 2) developed and built inter-agency and international support for new sub-national, non-governmental CVE networks, including ones focused on cities (Strong Cities Network), researchers (RESOLVE), and civil society, as well as regional CVE initiatives in the Western Balkans and East Africa.

Bureau of Counterterrorism

May 2014-Dec 2014

US Department of State (Political Appointee)

Director of Multilateral Affairs

- Principal adviser to the CT Coordinator on a wide range of multilateral CT and CVE issues, including those involving the UN, Global Counterterrorism Forum (GCTF), and regional organizations including the African Union.

- Designed a strategy to “multilateralize” efforts to stem the flow of “foreign terrorist fighters” (FTFs), which included the development of the GCTF’s Foreign Terrorist Fighter Good Practices and Security Council Resolution 2178 (adopted during SC session chaired by President Obama).
- Served as the Department’s GCTF Coordinator and co-head of U.S. Delegation to the G7’s Roma-Lyon Group.
- Worked with State and inter-agency partners and senior officials in select partner governments, the UN and other multilateral bodies, to develop civilian-focused CT and CVE initiatives that advance U.S. strategic priorities, with a particular focus on rule of law-related activities.
- Supervised a 10-person office and oversee CT Bureau’s Counterterrorism Engagement Fund (some $7-10 million per year).

Bureau of Counterterrorism

January 2010-May 2014

US Department of State, (Political appointee)

Senior Advisor and GCTF Coordinator

- Advised the CT Coordinator on a range of civilian-focused bilateral and multilateral strategic CT and CVE issues.
- Played a major role in the development of the Bureau’s CT and CVE strategy and initiatives.
- With support from the Coordinator, led Department of State efforts to design and build inter-agency and international support for the 30 member GCTF and the two international training centers it inspired: 1) Hedayah, the first-ever international center of excellence on countering violent extremism, which opened in Abu Dhabi in December 2012 and 2) the International Institute on Justice and the Rule of Law, which was launched in Malta in June 2014.
- Developed concept and worked to build international support for first-ever public-private, global fund to support local anti-extremist groups in front-line countries – the Global Community Engagement and Resilience Fund (GCERF), which was formally established in Geneva in September 2014.
- Oversaw the development of a series of GCTF civilian-focused CT and CVE good practices that provide guidance to CT/CVE practitioners/policymakers in discrete thematic areas.
- Designed and led a CT Bureau effort to encourage partner governments to develop comprehensive, rule of law-based approaches to addressing terrorism and violent extremism.
