

table of contents

spring 2015 vol. 1, no. 1

Editors' note	v
Bridging the divide between behavioral science and policy Craig R. Fox & Sim B. Sitkin	1
Spotlight: Challenging assumptions about behavioral policy
Intuition is not evidence: Prescriptions for behavioral interventions from social psychology Timothy D. Wilson & Lindsay P. Juarez	13
Small behavioral science-informed changes can produce large policy-relevant effects Robert B. Cialdini, Steve J. Martin, & Noah J. Goldstein	21
Active choosing or default rules? The policymaker's dilemma Cass R. Sunstein	29
Warning: You are about to be nudged George Loewenstein, Cindy Bryce, David Hagmann, & Sachin Rajpal	35
Workplace stressors & health outcomes: Health policy for the workplace Joel Goh, Jeffrey Pfeffer, & Stefanos A. Zenios	43
Time to retire: Why Americans claim benefits early & how to encourage delay Melissa A. Z. Knoll, Kirstin C. Appelt, Eric J. Johnson, & Jonathan E. Westfall	53
Designing better energy metrics for consumers Richard P. Larrick, Jack B. Soll, & Ralph L. Keeney	63
Payer mix & financial health drive hospital quality: Implications for value-based reimbursement policies Matthew Manary, Richard Staelin, William Boulding, & Seth W. Glickman	77
Editorial policy	85