Urban and Regional Policy and Its Effects
Volume 4
Margaret Weir, Nancy Pindus, Howard Wial & Harold Wolman, eds.
Volume four of the series introduces and examines the concept of regional resilience, explaining how resilience can be promoted—or impeded—by regional characteristics and public policies. The authors illuminate how the walls that now segment metropolitan regions across political jurisdictions and across institutions have to be bridged for regions to cultivate resilience.

Digital Schools
How Technology Can Transform Education
Darrell M. West
“In this pithy volume, Darrell West offers wise words of both optimism and caution. He notes the promise of new technologies to improve schooling in the twenty-first century, but cautions that these advances will only deliver if accompanied by a tough-minded willingness to rethink the structure and culture of schools and school systems. Policymakers and educators alike would do well to heed the lessons West offers.” —Frederick M. Hess, American Enterprise Institute

Education Governance for the Twenty-First Century
Overcoming the Structural Barriers to School Reform
Paul Manna & Patrick McGuinn, eds.
This volume comprehensively assesses the strengths and weaknesses of what remains of the old in education governance, scrutinizes how traditional governance forms are changing, and suggests how governing arrangements might be further altered to produce better educational outcomes for children. See page 1 for additional description.

Strife and Progress
Portfolio Strategies for Managing Urban Schools
Paul T. Hill, Christine Campbell & Betheny Gross
This important new book details and evaluates a radical and promising new approach to K-12 education reform. Strife and Progress explains for a broad audience the “portfolio strategy” for providing urban education—its rationale, implementation, and results. Under the portfolio strategy, cities use anything that works, indifferent to whether schools are run by the public district or private entities.
